ABOUT ACTHIV 2010

The Foundation for the American Conference for the Treatment of HIV is a non-profit organization established in 2006 for the sole purpose of producing and executing a treatment education conference for frontline HIV care providers. The mission of the foundation and the goals of the conference are:

- To conduct a state-of-the-science meeting for primary clinical care providers (physicians, nurses, physician assistants, nurse practitioners, psychologists, pharmacists, et. al.)
- To translate the latest developments in HIV clinical science to the delivery of medical care to persons with HIV infection
- To learn from active clinical care providers about their experience in treating persons with HIV infection in order to advance clinical care and research.

Target Audience

ACTHIV is targeted toward frontline providers of persons at risk of or with HIV infection including: physicians (both specialists and primary care/family medicine), nurses, pharmacists, and medical case managers (including social workers). Psychologists, mental health and substance abuse workers, treatment advocates, treatment educators, and other healthcare professionals involved in caring for those infected with HIV may also benefit from participation.

Global Learning Objectives

At the conclusion of the conference, participants will be able to:

- Design treatment regimens for both treatment-naïve and -experienced patients based on recent changes to the antiretroviral guidelines
- Implement strategies to promote adherence and retention in care
- Utilize antiretrovirals for pre- and post-HIV-exposure prophylaxis based on best practices
- Assess the role of immune activation on the complications related to HIV disease

- Implement clinical monitoring to screen and manage common co-morbidities in people living with HIV/AIDS
- Employ evidence-based strategies for diagnosing and managing patients with HIV and cancer
- Diagnose and manage patients with concurrent HIV and mental illness or addiction with special attention to managing drug interactions with psychotropic agents and the timing of psychiatric referral
- Adopt and implement prevention strategies for special populations, including youth, men who have sex with men, transgenders, immigrants and those who are incarcerated or homeless, given the unique risks of these populations
- Modify evaluation and treatment approaches to ensure culturally competent delivery of HIV-related health services to special populations, including youth, men who have sex with men, transgenders, immigrants and those who are incarcerated or homeless, based on the needs of these populations

Additional Objectives

The following additional global objectives were identified for HIV: The Basics, which is targeted to those providers who are relatively new to HIV care, as well as those who have not provided care to persons with HIV infection in some time.

- Appropriately test and diagnose HIV infection
- Properly assess the immune status of HIV-infected persons entering care
- Initiate effective highly active antiretroviral therapy HIV-infected persons.

Learning objectives for individual talks can be found on the speaker evaluation form.

Welcome from the Program Committee Co-Chairs

Welcome to the American Conference for the Treatment of HIV (ACTHIV).

We are delighted that you have decided to join us in exploring the excitement and challenges of caring for people living with HIV infection. This is our fourth meeting following three prior successful events in Atlanta, Dallas and Denver. HIV care and treatment continues to evolve with new scientific discoveries, new drug classes and treatment breakthroughs with associated management challenges, and we are pleased to be meeting again to have this opportunity to help keep you, the nation's front-line HIV care providers, up to date with the latest developments in the care and treatment of persons living with HIV infection.

The news since our last meeting remains both daunting and encouraging. Numerous recommendations on when to start antiretroviral therapy have changed, moving the CD4 cell count at which initiation is recommended higher. Updated guidelines on the prevention and treatment of opportunistic infections have also been seen in the past year. As HIV testing has become more routine, the number of patients who now know their status and seek treatment is beginning to increase more quickly. Disparities in HIV incidence and transmission remain a challenge, especially in certain populations, such as men who have sex with men and women. Data from vaccine and pre-exposure prophylaxis trials remind us that our field still faces many challenges although data from microbicide trials suggest we might be on the verge of making significant headway in primary HIV prevention. The clinical consequences of longer survival continue to emerge with important new and actionable data on cardiovascular disease, bone health, malignancies, viral hepatitis, neurocognition and maintaining a high quality of life. Although exciting newer treatment options have improved the quality and quantity of life for many persons living with HIV infection, the benefits are not shared by all due to continued inequities in access to care, differential treatment adherence rates, and different burdens in pre-existing conditions and side effects of treatment. As persons living with HIV infection continue to live longer lives, we are presented with the challenge of managing HIV infection along with the medical problems associated with aging.

HIV care providers are increasingly the point of access through which their clients access the healthcare system. We are expected to not only treat their chronic HIV diseases, but manage the total package of care and wellness, from routine health care maintenance to smoking cessation to age-appropriate cardiovascular and cancer screening to interventions designed to prevent onward transmission of HIV infection. And everything else in between. It is indeed a time of change for clinicians working in this field.

Supported by a number of federal, public and private agencies, this meeting is designed to address the team concept of HIV care. Dedicated clinicians have been integrally involved in planning ACTHIV and providers are the intended audience of this national conference. Certain ACTHIV sessions will utilize an electronic Audience Response System to encourage interaction and a dialogue among speakers and the participants. This year ACTHIV is presented with both single track plenary sessions and breakout sessions, allowing all attendees to maximize their participation in the entire meeting.

We look forward to meeting with you and to hearing your insights, along with your colleagues, in this vitally important field.

Sincerely,

Kathleen E. Squires, M.D.

ACTHIV Program Committee Co-Chair

On behalf of the Board of Directors of The American Conference on the Treatment of HIV (ACTHIV),
WELCOME TO DENVER!

In September, 2005, the inaugural Conference on the Treatment and Management of HIV Infection in the United States was held in Atlanta, Georgia. This conference was a cooperative project of ten federal agencies involved in the care of HIV, and was a great success. Subsequent to that meeting it was decided that the conference should be independent of the government, and so the not-for-profit Foundation for The American Conference on the Treatment of HIV was created.

The first "ACTHIV" conference was held in May 2007 in Dallas, Texas and continued the precedent of a clinically oriented, state-of-the-art HIV conference. In 2009 we moved to Denver, and changed to annual instead of biennial meetings. Over the last year the foundation has worked with program co-chairs Kathleen Squires and John T. Brooks, the program committee, and a panel of co-operating federal agencies to put together this week's third ACTHIV.

There are many conferences devoted to HIV, both national and international, but few of them are as uniquely focused on the clinical care of those living with HIV. ACTHIV is devoted to providing useful clinical information for those involved in frontline care of HIV. We hope that you will find the information presented at this conference beneficial in the day-to-day management and care of your patients.

Sincerely,

Douglas J. Ward, MD, FACP
